Syron's Market

Syron's Market has only been open for three years, but owner Jeff Syron is no newcomer to the meat business. He has 40 years of experience and was just 15 when he started working at Greulich's Market in Guilderland. His part-time job turned into a career, and he worked under some of the area's most experienced butchers. He rose through the ranks and was eventually promoted to manager of the meat department. After leaving Greulich's, Jeff spent ten years working in the food service business as a salesman and meat buyer.

Syron had his three sons in mind when he opened Syron's Market. His twins, Trevor and Stephen, work full time at the shop while his oldest son, Nick, works there part time and helps with social media. Jeff's wife, Katie, is an integral part of the business and handles the office and administrative work.

Syron's Market offers a wide variety of high-quality meats, seafood, baked goods, and deli items (including Boarshead products). Subs and sandwiches are made with fresh breads and rolls that are baked on the premises, and the store offers light catering. Menu choices include cold salads, baked ziti, meatballs, eggplant parmesan, and sausage and peppers.

Jeff knows the importance of cleanliness and keeps the store and its 24-foot meat case impeccably neat, clean, and sanitary. The case is packed with beef, chicken, and pork, and he says that anyone who tries his products will quickly come to appreciate "the difference between good and great."

The store has developed a loyal clientele and welcomes new customers each week. Jeff receives many compliments on his staff's excellent customer service and believes it is one of their greatest attributes—second only to their quality products.

Jeff's father, grandfather, and uncle all worked in the meat business, and he and his sons are carrying on a long family tradition. They hope to build on their success and open a second location, but for now they remain focused on providing their customers with products and services that exceed all expectations. □
